Once you have crossed the long tree-lined avenue of access to Villa Artom you immediately enter a fascinating world, permeated with history, almost fairytale-like that transfers feelings of peace, serenity and extreme beauty that refer to the elegance of the buildings of the 1700s. Precisely in that period, it became the residence of one of the most famous families of that Italian historical period: the Artom family, a family of Jewish origin who contributed a lot to the historical development of Piedmont, the nation and even scientific discoveries. Isaac Artom, contributed to the unification of Italy, together with Camillo Benso count of Cavour, was ambassador and minister for the Vienna peace talks of 1866, avoided the entry of Francesco Giuseppe on Rome, revealing himself as the true architect of the "Breccia about Rome". Alexander also lived there, the best known of all the Artom, inventor of the radiogoniometer as well as countless patents, donated to the State. Its directional radio antennas are now the basis of telecommunication, radio and television, maritime aerospace, radio astronomy and radar astronomy systems. It is therefore a villa of great inspiration, of creativity, which has transmitted to the people who have lived there and to its guests unique, special sensations, which have generated great things. The property also stands on a hill that was rich in historical excellence, which lived in that area, such as the nobel prize Rita Levi Montalcini and the painter Giuseppe Manzone. So entering this property is like immersing yourself in different chapters of the history of Italy. The emotions are innumerable and the artistic and intellectual richness of the house is tangible. Every single detail or material used is a reference to elegance, value, historicity, charm: from the floors, to the doors, to the fireplaces, to the countless frescoes, all elements that with an accurate and skilful recovery, make this home incredibly prestigious and precious. Villa Artom, or Villa del Chiossetto, extends over a hill surrounded by fields and woods, on a total area of ??about 1800 square meters, including the rustic, the stables and the noble main part, arranged on three levels. It is surrounded by five hectares, with a park facing south, enriched by imposing ancient trees. It is a dwelling that lends itself well to being a prestigious family residence or as a high-quality accommodation facility such as a relais or a beauty farm that would well reflect the charm of this part of Monferrato and of these hills that have become beauty UNESCO heritage.
